Like so many around the world, LG Electronics has been proactively dealing with the impact of the coronavirus pandemic. In light of business uncertainties arising from this national and international crisis, we want you to know that LG is here for you – focused on business continuity and minimizing disruptions.

LG's top priority is the health of our employees who support customers like you day in and day out. Protective measures include suspending business travel, restricting visitors, sanitizing facilities and wherever possible working remotely and meeting virtually for social distancing. We have established a comprehensive response protocol for managing exposure risks and responding quickly at the local and national levels. LG will continue to monitor the evolving situation and follow guidance from government authorities and health agencies.

During these challenging times, we are confident in our ability to continue providing you with the high level of support you've come to expect from LG. Our plants are up and running and at this time our inventory levels are generally healthy. Depending on how things progress, there may be some logistics challenges, and we will work with you on delivery schedules. The bottom line: even working remotely, the LG team is at your service as always.

Thank you for your partnership and trust in us, especially during these precarious times as we weather this storm together.
